

A Piece of My Love

Because my heart was rent in two,
I rejected love, my face blue.
Each waking moment I put up a fight,
My pain consumed me; I could not sleep at night.

Many have come to express their love,
But leave empty-handed, no prerequisites thereof.
However, you are different.
Your love is exhilarant.
With you, I can express the way I feel.

This is not a dream; for it is all too real.
To tell the story of our meeting
would be a memory, never fleeting.
God heard and answered my prayer,
especially those from my innermost layer.

Here you stand so elegant and wise,
while saying vows tears ski down my eyes.
At our wedding we are singing.
Approaching the car, bells are ringing.

Finally, we salute pain and strife,
for I am your husband, and you are my wife!
